For a 50-year-old father of six, Sting, celebrated this month on VH1, is in almost indecently good physical shape. And, invited into his dressing-room before a show in New Orleans, I can see for myself why. I knew he did a long yoga session every day; what I didn't know was how strenuous it was. Stripped to the waist, he twists his body into some frankly amazing contortions, and his expression is otherworldly, as though he has been transported to some other place. It is an amazing sight.

Some time before all this, I sit down with him for a couple of hours. He is a fluent conversationalist, albeit with that habit of rarely looking you in the eye, which has the illusion of making him appear ill at ease when he clearly is not.

He has good reason not to be. Of solo artists, he is said to be the world's number one box-office draw, bigger even than his friend Madonna (who was introduced to Guy Ritchie by Sting and his wife Trudie Styler). His fortune is estimated at £200m – a long way from his previous incarnation as plain old Gordon Sumner, a teacher from Wallsend in Tyne and Wear. So it is no wonder that his former accountant was notoriously able to defraud him of £6m without him missing it.

'Seven million,' he corrects me, merrily, when I bring up the subject. 'He'd created something like 70 separate bank accounts in different countries, and the money was coming in in so many denominations from so many sources ... touring, recording, publishing, merchandising, TV appearances. So for that kind of money to be siphoned away is not that surprising. And since it took forensic accountants about two years to sort through the complexities, how could a bass player figure it out? But I understand the cynicism: "Oh he's so rich he didn't even notice."'

He is so rich, in fact, that it takes him a while just to tell me where all his homes are. 'I've lived in hotels for 25 years,' he says, 'and I've collected homes all over the world so that to some extent I can be relieved of that. To check into a hotel and shut the door is kind of prison-like. It's nicer to arrive somewhere you own, with a couple of books you own, a couple of paintings, something of yours. It's a nice luxury and I'm glad of it.'

I ask whether he knows how many people work for him? 'About half of them,' he says, and chuckles. 'No, a lot. We have so many homes, so many children. But actually I don't want to know. Because this whole artifice is suspended from a pretty narrow membrane, which is me being able to match melody and lyrics. If I think that delicate thing is supporting this huge infrastructure, I'll freak out.'

LA CONFIDENTIAL

Kumars attacks

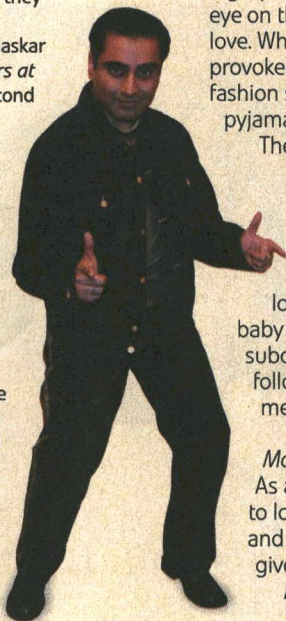

Sanjeev Bhaskar admits to feeling disoriented when he invites his parents onto the set of The Kumars at No 42, the spoof chat show in which guests are put through their paces by a fictitious Indian family. 'It's rather unsettling when I see my TV parents chatting to my real parents,' he says. 'I think, "Are they talking about what I was like as a kid, or what I did on the set the other day?" And it doesn't help when my father brings along this one particular uncle, who follows me around everywhere after the show. I feel this shadow over me, turn round and there he is with his hand outstretched, waiting to be introduced to whoever I'm talking to.'

Nonetheless, as embarrassing as his family might sometimes be, Bhaskar could not have created the Kumars without them. Indeed, a particular incident provided the inspiration for an Indian family asking impertinent questions. 'I once took a girlfriend home to meet my parents. And my dad said to her, "I'm very pleased to meet you. How much does your father earn?"'

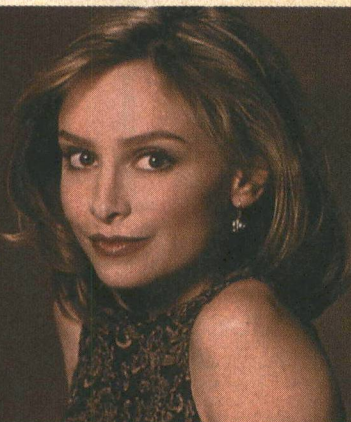

Mr and Mrs Bhaskar are apparently now satisfied with how much their 38-year-old son is earning (which is enough for him to have recently bought his first home, a swish flat in London's pricey Islington), after years of despairing at his plans to become an actor. 'My mother claims that she walked in to the room when I was a baby to find my dad leaning over the cot, repeating, in that subliminal way, "I want to be a businessman." Later, when I said I wanted to be an actor, they said, "You mean a doctor."'

His fans will be pleased Bhaskar stuck to his guns. The Kumars at No 42, in the forthcoming second series, has yielded such splendidly improbable sights as the interior designer Laurence Llewelyn-Bowen and hardman actor Ray Winstone sharing a set. 'I went in to the dressing room to see Ray,' Bhaskar says, 'and he said, "Is 'e 'ere yet, that Laurence?" I said, "Yes". So out he went and came back with Laurence. He said, "'Ere y'are mate, have a beer. In fact, line 'em up." And Laurence replied, "Only one before show time, darling". Absolutely priceless.'

The Kumars at No 42, Play, Sunday 28th, from 9.00pm

Ally McBeal: the final verdict

So farewell, Ally McBeal. E4 airs the hit comedy-drama's final episode this month, Fox TV executives having reached the conclusion that all good things must come to an end – especially good things with falling ratings. After five seasons, creator David E Kelley has scripted a special ending with plenty of guest characters.

But what of the show's legacy? Apart from propelling little-known actress Calista Flockhart towards global fame and briefly reviving the career of the brilliant but tormented actor Robert Downey Jr, whether you love it, loathe it, or, like me, just can't make up your mind which, Ally McBeal has undoubtedly had an impact shared by few other television series.

Like Bridget Jones, Ally McBeal was adored by many professional women in their twenties and thirties, who could relate to the difficulty of holding down a high-pressure job, while keeping an increasingly nervous eye on the biological clock and handling neuroses about love. While Flockhart's almost transparent skinniness provoked endless debate, McBeal's clothes caused a fashion stampede. In America especially, her comfy pyjamas became de rigueur.

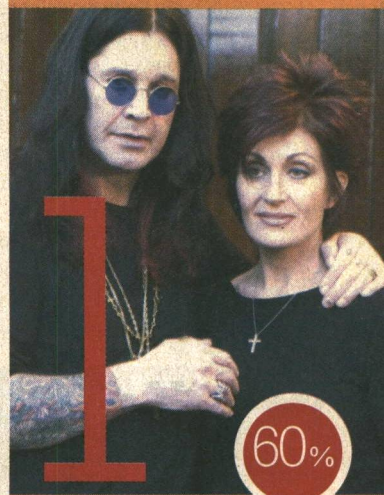

The innovative filming techniques spawned a new fashion, too. Other TV executives watched, admired and learned from the fantasy cartoon elements used to highlight Ally's inner turmoil (such as the arrows pounding into her heart when she was rejected in love), while the computer-generated dancing baby – who supposedly represented Ally's subconscious desire for a child – gained a cult following, and numerous lines of spin-off merchandise all of its own.

As with so many pioneers, however, Ally McBeal became a victim of its own success. As a result of being widely copied, it ceased to look original. But laughs, tears, songs, old and new faces and wedding bells should give the show a fabulous finale.

Ally McBeal, E4, Sunday 9th, 9.00pm

Will power

He's found success as a star of the popular Australian drama The Secret Life of Us – now Joel Edgerton tells Tina Ogle that his sights are set on making it big in Hollywood

IF IT HADN'T BEEN for a tight-red satin dress and high heels abandoned by a Jamaican women's basketball player, Australian Joel Edgerton might never have made it into acting.

The 28-year-old explains: 'I did my graduating play from drama school dressed as a Frenchwoman. I got the shoes in a second-hand shop. An agent in Sydney took to me, but I'm not sure if it was because of the dress or that I had some worthwhile talent.'

This quirky understatement is there is a downside. I used to quite regularly go and watch a movie by myself but now I'm just super-aware. There'll be people there saying, "There's that guy from that show, he's on his own, he must be a loser!"

The son of a lawyer and a housewife, Edgerton grew up on the outskirts of Sydney with his brother, Nash. Always vaguely interested in acting, it was only when he was 17 that he decided to apply to drama school. He was worried about what his parents show and appearing in the latest Star Wars blockbuster. But what happened to Nash? 'He's still alive. He's a very successful stuntman and has doubled for Ewan McGregor. He's edited and directed as well.'

The chance to work with George Lucas on the Star Wars film came about because the latest in the series of epic sci-fi movies was shot in Australia. They were looking for someone to play the part of a younger Uncle Owen Lars and Edgerton

'It was immediately evident that it was a good script with really interesting characters. [Will] reminded me of a lot of the guys I grew up with'

typical of the actor who returns to E4 in a new series of offbeat Melbourne drama The Secret Life of Us. As shy yet dogged scaffolder Will, a member of the group of twentysomething friends who agonise over life's little details, he has achieved widespread public recognition, particularly in his native Australia.

While the ambitious side of him welcomes this heightened public profile, he confesses to a certain self-consciousness that can make it difficult coping with his new-found celebrity. 'I'm pretty good at it but would make of his decision until his brother stepped in. 'He totally took the heat off me by deciding he was going to go and become a stuntman. It was made even worse by the fact that he'd spent a year doing electrical engineering at university and then quit – he'd met a karate expert one night at a function. My folks totally freaked out.'

The parents are proud now though, what with Joel in a hit television fitted the bill. 'I could do a decent American accent and I looked like a decent replica of Phil Brown, who played the older version of the character [in the first Star Wars film]. It was a fascinating job but, also, practically, a mundane work experience. There was no great challenge to it, but it rates up there as the most bizarre job I've ever had.'

After leaving drama school, he did several years in theatre ('a lot of Shakespeare') before landing small parts in low-budget movies. These included Erskineville Kings and a film with Kylie Minogue called Sample People. 'Not a great movie,' he says with typical honesty.

Edgerton was not tempted down the route of soap, however. 'As horrible as it sounds, if I'd had to do a show like Neighbours or Home and Away I'd probably have ended up committing suicide or something.'

When the script for The Secret Life of Us came up though, he was desperate to do it. 'It was immediately evident that it was a good script with really interesting characters. I didn't stop for coffee once.'

He was attracted to Will because of the familiarity of the character. 'He reminded me of a lot of guys that I grew up with. They have their hearts on their sleeves and are never very articulate about things. But when they talk, there's a certain kind of wisdom behind it. And he was outside the trendy stream of things, which I also really liked.'

British viewers may also have caught Edgerton recently in BBC sitcom Dossa and Joe, the latest comedy from Caroline Aherne. 'Oh, that was just a great job. Caroline is really funny and her great merit is that she's not set in her ways; if something is funny she'll run with it. It was a small part but I loved it.'

So what could possibly be next? Would he head for the Hollywood Hills given the chance? 'Oh yeah, I'd be there at the sniff of an invitation. A lot of actors will try to be cool and say, "Oh no", but I think they're lying, except for a very few. I want to go and do a few tests.'

'But I've also been writing a lot and I've currently got two screenplays in development in Australia, one of which I want my brother to direct. I don't ever not want to be an actor, but I don't want to just be an actor either.'

WHO DARES WINS

It may look like a saucy challenge show, but the makers of Wudja? Cudja? believe they're making pioneering television.
Words: Nick Griffiths

PALM TREES LINE THE promenade, yachts bob in the harbour, the sun bleaches painted eateries, and four bare-chested young Englishmen shout 'scorchio!' Welcome to San Antonio, Ibiza, at the start of the holiday season.

There is charm to be found here among the nightclubs and football shirts. The locals know what to expect and cater accordingly. Bulldozers are already pushing imported sand along the beach, to provide a soft landing. Across the island, on Pogo Pogo beach, ITV2's Wudja?

Cudja? film crew is cajoling sunbathers into accepting dares for euros. Wud ... sorry, would two women, for instance, perform a bikini tug-of-war (below left) in which the winner receives €200 (around £130)?

Nineteen-year-old Germans Nadine and Julia would. Indeed, Nadine had previously taken on the 'boob petition', in which she was given three minutes to find 10 lounging youths willing to sign her chest.

This, if the TV companies are to be believed, is the type of late-night entertainment hip 18 to 34-year-old viewers are after: real people doing bonkers things, ideally wearing very little. The show's makers maintain they are acutely aware of what groovy young people want to watch. Indeed, series producer Jamie Farrow suggests the show challenges accepted notions of entertainment.

'Our television audience is savvy enough that if they were hearing last year's soundtrack they would know they were being cheated. So we're looking for fresh forms of entertainment - pushing the boundaries.'

Wudja? Cudja? is based on a Dutch show called Over the Top, created by the company behind Big Brother. It will be filmed in Ibiza, Blackpool, Brighton and Bournemouth and presented by bubbly things Abbie Eastwood and Jayne Sharp.

'With all the horrible things going on in the world, it's nice people can go out and have a laugh,' says Eastwood (above left with Sharp).

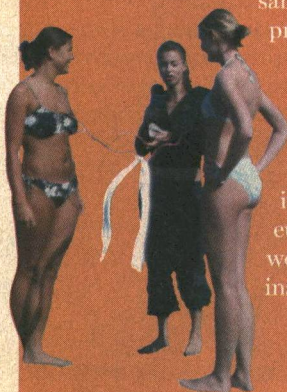

There is a caveat: 'Not only are they fun-loving, but they can also be quite greedy.'

Jayne Sharp agrees: 'When we approach English people with a dare, 90 per cent of them are saying, "Yeah". If they win £300 it's the easiest money they'll ever earn.'

We discuss the televisual origins of this dare business, those Wannabes on Channel 4's The Word who would stop at nothing to get themselves on television. Even The Word host Terry Christian mocked. 'The one that made me so sick was the guy who ate a worm sandwich,' notes Jayne.

Ten years down the line ... here we are.

WAKING THE DEAD

I'd give any part of my anatomy to be able to pat one of these animals in my lifetime

FACTUAL

Debate rages on about the ethics of cloning, but Professor Mike Walker believes the controversial science could right the wrong of the Tasmanian Tiger, an Australian marsupial hunted out of existence. Words: Tim Ewbank

ON 7 SEPTEMBER, 1936, in a dark corner of a cage in Australia's Hobart zoo, a wolf-like creature with distinctive stripes, known as the Tasmanian Tiger, lay down to die. The day-shift keeper had forgotten to lock it in its hut and it perished from exposure. No one even bothered to discover whether it was male or female.

This was the last of the Tasmanian Tigers, or Thylacine, a unique species which had taken over 50 million years to evolve, but had now been wiped out in the space of 50 years, after farmers suspected it of preying on sheep.

Now, incredibly, the prospect of bringing the Tasmanian Tiger roaring back is moving ever closer thanks to a world-first breakthrough in the cloning process. Scientists at the Australian Museum have revived four Thylacine genes from the DNA of a 136-year-old preserved pup and have successfully replicated them. It's believed the DNA fragments extracted from tooth, bone and muscle contain thousands of copies of the complete set of the animals' 100,000 genes, which could work in a living cell. The museum team have been able to get the DNA to respond positively to a process called polymerase chain reaction (PCR), an important step because it made molecular cloning possible.

Within the next five years the team of geneticists hope to attempt fertilisation with a host animal – probably the Tasmanian Devil – with 2010 as the target date for the potential birth of the first cloned Tasmanian Tiger pup.

The project is being led by Professor Mike Archer, Director of the Australian Museum, who says: 'What was once nothing more than an impossible dream has taken another giant step closer to being a biological reality. I'd give any part of my anatomy to be able to pat one of these animals in my lifetime.'

The work of Professor Archer's team, detailed in Discovery Channel's programme End of Extinction: Cloning the Tasmanian Tiger, has had its fair share of critics. They have been accused of playing God and told their money would be better spent on conservation of threatened animals. Other critics have claimed the scientists are in danger of creating a freak show.

The programme traces the Thylacine's history and evolution to the recent extraction of tissue, the processing of the DNA and the latest advances in the project. Included is remarkable footage of a Tasmanian Tiger filmed at London Zoo in 1930, which is being shown on television for the first time. The programme also uses an animatronic model to create images of the creature as it would live in its normal dense forest habitat.

Professor Archer points out that there is enormous guilt among Australians and Tasmanians for the way the animal was hounded into extinction. Bringing it back would lift that burden.

Once found throughout Australia, the animal was a familiar sight. A dog-like marsupial about two feet high and four feet long, it was distinctive for its stripes and kangaroo-style hind legs; females had a pouch to carry their young.

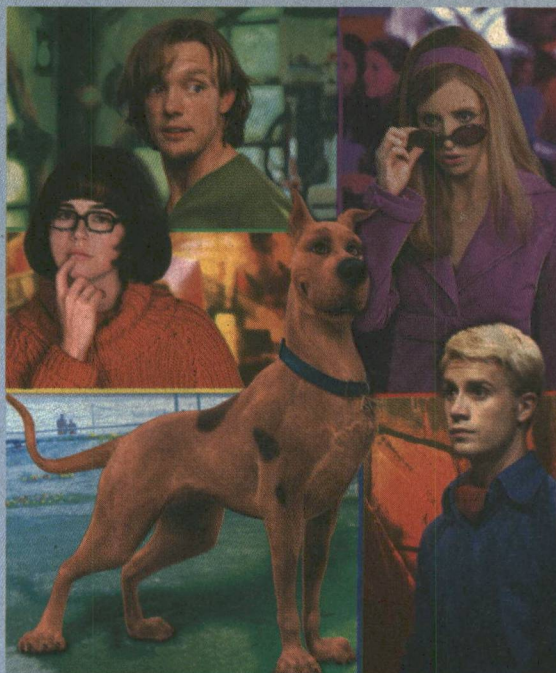

But the Tasmanian Tiger had all but disappeared from the mainland before white settlement began in 1788 and survived only in Tasmania. There, local settlers blamed it for attacking their sheep and mercilessly hunted it. In addition, a bounty was offered for each one killed.

'After the terrible treatment it was given, the Tasmanian Tiger deserves a second chance of life,' says Professor Archer. 'There is evidence that it could be a tame animal and a good companion for humans. The Tasmanian Tiger got a bad reputation and sadly was hunted into extinction.'

'The aim of our project is not just to create one animal as a curiosity but to return the species to the wild as a viable population. Frankly, if we didn't do that we'd be wasting our time. We have both male and female DNA but there is still a long way to go. We have been crossing thresholds people told us it would be impossible to cross. We keep meeting brick walls and then knock the bricks down.'

'I would dearly love to bring the animal back. To actually reverse extinction, even if it is in just this one special instance, would be the biological equivalent of the first walk on the moon – something thought to be way beyond dreams. If we manage it, then I think there would be hundreds of animals sitting in jars cheering us on.' cq

A bit of a Doo

As the long-awaited Scooby-Doo film premieres in the UK with a computer-generated Scooby and live-action Mystery Inc gang, Jane Oddy talks to the stars of the new movie

Whether you're old enough to remember Scooby-Doo the first time round or young enough to be enjoying the repeats, that cowardly Great Dane is etched on our memories for ever. And now you can see the comical canine in a new live-action film.

Scooby and the Mystery Inc gang – Fred, Daphne, Velma and Shaggy – have delighted kids since 1969. So turning such an iconic cartoon into a 90-minute live-action movie was done with great trepidation, which is partly why it's taken eight years for Scooby-Doo (premiering on Friday 12th) to finally reach our screens. The other reason is that computer animation has only recently developed sufficiently to re-create a life-like Scooby.

Producer Charles Roven observes: 'We felt it was time to take advantage of the visual effects and give audiences a glimpse of what Scooby and the gang would be like if they existed in the world today.'

(below), a perpetual damsel in distress. 'But sometimes it's harder to play someone who trips herself up rather than someone who relies on her physical talents, like Buffy.'

The movie's six-month shoot allowed 25-year-old Gellar to spend time with her fiancé, Freddie Prinze Jr, who plays leader Fred Jones (above right) in the film. Gellar enthuses, 'It was a real family affair because we've both worked with Matthew Lillard (who plays Shaggy, top left) on She's All That and I know Matthew's wife.'

Gellar and Prinze were amused they get to kiss in the movie. 'We'll take any chance we can get. We're not shy about it,' says Prinze Jr, 26, who was apprehensive about playing Fred: 'I'm such a fan of the series I didn't want to be a part of the film unless it matched the cartoon.'

He shares his passion with Linda Cardellini, who plays brainy Velma Dinkley (above left). 'My favourite character was Scooby Dumb; he's Scooby's cousin from Down South who wasn't very bright.'

The cast had to work without a physical Scooby-Doo. 'It was like working with a ghost,' says Lillard, who has the bulk of those scenes. He's perfectly cast as Shaggy, but asked if he shares his character's appetite, 32-year-old Lillard laughs. 'Can anyone possibly eat as much as Shaggy?' cq

Filmgoers who wouldn't normally have sat through a kung fu movie flocked to see director Ang Lee's Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon, the Oscar-winning epic that brought martial arts to the masses. Interview: Lawrie Masterson

TO ANGLEE, the director whose Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon won last year's Academy Award for Best Foreign Language Film, making a movie is a bit like being in an ice-cream parlour that offers 50 different flavours and being allowed to blend them all together.

'It's fun,' says Lee. 'To me, film-making is adventurous. Each movie should have your signature and for me, so far, it has been social obligation versus personal free will. They are in conflict, so that mystery to me is the most important.'

Starring Chow Yun-Fat, Michelle Yeoh and Chang Chen, Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon, which debuts on Sky Movies Premier this month, is a love story set against the breathtaking landscapes of ancient China and revolving around a legendary sword known as the Green Destiny.

Lee, 47, has described the movie as 'kind of a dream of China - a China that probably never existed, except in my boyhood fantasies.' It features arguably the most spectacular and sophisticated martial arts scenes ever filmed but, while saying he wants people to believe in 'magical realism', Lee debunks any mystery behind them.

'Thanks to new technology allowing wires to be digitally removed, we were able to use wires a lot thicker and do bigger and more graceful movements and realistic suspension. I think that way of doing the leaping is kind of unprecedented,' he says.

'To me, they're really metaphorical visual effects about defying gravity. We're portraying women in this repressed Chinese society. We squeeze them in one end and on the other end they are exuberant. They fly. They take off and, in doing the action, they fully express themselves.

'We had to do the scriptwriting on the set while we tried to figure out one shot at a time, but this is how it works: I do the daydreaming and then Mr Yuen Wo Ping, the master of choreography, does the choreography. He, like most of the great ones, came not from a martial arts background but from Chinese opera.'

Tiger feet: scenes from the effects-laden, Oscar-winning martial arts epic Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon, and, above, director Ang Lee surveys the action on set

'I want to try different things, and each and every genre I do I will try to bend or mix with something else, to find new angles and to put my mark on it as I go through the experience myself'

One of the many difficulties Lee faced while filming in China was the mere presence of Hong Kong action hero Yun-Fat. 'When he arrived at the airport it almost came to a halt for 45 minutes because all the immigration officers rushed in to try to get his autograph,' Lee recalls. 'Thousands of people tried to get in. That's how big he is. He needs at least four bodyguards whenever he goes out and it's just chaos.'

The film earned 10 Academy Award nominations and won in four categories. Lee won the David Lean Award for Direction at the Baftas and Best Director at the Golden Globe Awards, where his movie also picked up another Best Foreign Language Film trophy.

Born in Taiwan, Lee graduated from the National Taiwan College of Arts and then continued his studies in America. He first came to prominence in the early 1990s with the American-set The Wedding Banquet, a kind of gay Green Card, and Eat Drink Man Woman, both of which were nominated for Best Foreign Language Film Oscars.

Lee's choice of projects prove he's a film-maker who revels in disrupting his audience's expectations, and his first full-length English language film, Sense and Sensibility (1995), broke him as a major director. It earned star Emma Thompson an Oscar for her sublime screenplay.

He followed that up with the critically acclaimed The Ice Storm, an uncomfortable examination of a 1970s dysfunctional family (1997), and civil war drama Ride with the Devil (1999), before embarking on Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon. He recently directed a short film for BMW called Chosen, starring Clive Owen, and is set to change pace yet again with comic book adaptation The Hulk, starring Jennifer Connelly and Australian actor Eric Bana as Dr Bruce Banner, aka the angry green giant of the title.

'I try to impress people. Whatever it takes,' Lee laughs. He becomes more serious again and adds, 'Of course I want to try different things, and each and every genre I do I will try to bend or mix with something else, to find new angles and to put my mark on it as I go through the experience myself.'

'To me it's a great discovery of myself. It's a lot like what the Chinese say about a learning experience - it's like rolling against the current. If you stay in the same place you go backwards.'

'I think the greatest fear for the artist is to be wiped out. We will get stale some day and lose freshness, both creatively and with the audience, and we'll be eliminated.' cg

TOP PREMIERES

Traffic

Sky Movies Premier, Saturday 27th, 10.00pm
Director Steven Soderbergh brilliantly balances the personal and the epic in his overhaul of the acclaimed early Channel 4 mini-series Traffic. The picture, which stars, among others, Michael Douglas, Catherine Zeta-Jones, Benicio Del Toro and Don Cheadle, skilfully weaves together four story strands dealing with the problem of drugs. Soderbergh keeps his indie sensibilities intact in a film that has the edgy, unpolished look of a low-budget production. The director himself (hiding behind a pseudonym) handles the cinematography chores with nervy skill. The film scooped four Oscars, including one for Best Director and a Best Supporting Actor gong for Del Toro's stand-out turn as a conscience-stricken Mexican cop.

Vertical Limit

Sky Movies Premier, Saturday 13th, 8.00pm
New Zealand-born film-maker Martin Campbell knows a thing or two about handling pulse-pounding action movies, having directed Pierce Brosnan's first Bond outing, GoldenEye, and the swashbuckling romp The Mask of Zorro. Here he fashions a supremely suspenseful, high-altitude thriller with a plot that gleefully embraces a hazardous mission to rescue stranded climbers on K2, an evil millionaire and unpredictable explosives.

CLASSICS TO CATCH

Heat

Carlton Cinema, Monday 29th, 9.00pm
For this, arguably his finest endeavour to date, director Michael Mann deftly moulds the chilly high-tech visuals, designer editing and lyrical hard-boiled dialogue of early assignments such as Thief and Manhunter into a thoughtful and strangely melancholy crime epic. The film marks the electrifying, if brief, first on-screen pairing of Method acting titans Al Pacino and Robert De Niro. The former plays an obsessive cop; the latter his quarry, a meticulous, almost Zen-like, master thief.

Get Carter

TCM, Friday 19th, 10.55pm
That Michael Caine did not garner a single acting honour for his fantastic, career-best performance in this gritty 1971 crime flick is truly a travesty. A character-study that's terrifying in its ruthless intensity, Caine plays the gangster of the title returning to his old stomping ground of Newcastle to get to the bottom of his brother's death, and embarking on a cold-hearted campaign of vengeance. The astonishingly downbeat ending still packs a mighty punch.

Robert De Niro stars in the stylish crime drama Heat

FOR WHOM THE BELL TOLLS

Can you answer a couple of questions for me? I have a 12-year-old son who is an avid viewer of Nickelodeon and, therefore, I also have to watch it. For the past few months, I have been watching Saved by the Bell all over again (I remember watching it with my first son – he's 21 now!).

What has happened to the cast of the programme, where are they now and what are they up to? Also, was a second series of Two of a Kind made? We were just left up in the air as to whether Carrie would ever get together with the Professor. This is a very sad letter from a 46-year-old, isn't it? Hope you can help.

Cath Carr, e-mail

Saved by the Bell ran from 1989 to 1993, ending with the marriage of Zach and Kelly. Mark-Paul Gosselaar (Zach) is now 28, married to Lisa Ann Russell, and starring as Det John Clark Jr in NYPD Blue. He's soon to be seen in the movie Atomic Twister with Corbin Bernsen. Tiffani-Amber Thiessen (Kelly) went on to star in Beverly Hills 90210 and can be seen in the latest Woody Allen film, Hollywood Ending. Elizabeth Berkley (Jessie) went entirely against type with her infamous role in Showgirls before appearing in The First Wives Club. She's now in the American comedy series Titus. As for Two of a Kind, there was only ever one series of 22 episodes made, Cath, so it looks like we're going to be left guessing on the romance front!

I SPY AN EXCELLENT SECOND SERIES ...

I just wanted to drop you a line about Alias [Sydney Bristow, aka Jennifer Garner, is pictured above]. What an incredible show! I've been watching from the beginning and it just gets better and better. I'm not looking forward at all to the end of the season, when I'll have to survive my week without my dose of spy intrigue!

Are there any plans for its release on DVD or video? Unfortunately, I didn't have the foresight to record each episode, and would love to be able to buy it. I would like to know if there is any gossip about the second series – are we going to be having more high-profile guest stars? Is Sydney going to get found out? When are we going to get to see it?! Thanks, from a big fan who's pining away already!

'What an incredible show! I have been watching Alias from the beginning and it just gets better and better'

Abigail Murphy, e-mail

A Sky One spokesperson replies: 'We're glad to hear that you're such a fan of the fantastic series Alias. After the unforgettable season finale, we're all hanging on tenterhooks for the next series, which will air first on Sky One from early next year. Unfortunately, as yet there are no plans to release the series on DVD or VHS.'

WHO'S AFRAID OF MAURY POVICH?

I wholeheartedly disagree with Maury Povich's idea of helping guests overcome phobias (LivingTV). Chasing someone around the studio with a snake and screaming after them, 'You have to confront your fear' is downright cruel. People in the audience were howling as one woman screamed when faced with a tray of cotton wool balls and another ran away from a ream of foil. Weird phobias I admit but, come on Maury, show some sympathy and stop ridiculing your guests.

LOOKING OUT FOR THIRD WATCH

I've just watched the episode of ER [on E4] in which Dr Susan Lewis goes to New York looking for her sister and niece. Featured in the episode are characters from the series Third Watch, which was shown on Sky One some time ago. I was wondering if the channel has any plans to bring the show back – it's a favourite of mine.

Steve Boulton, e-mail

Sky One tells us they have the rights to show season one of Third Watch and may show it in future. However, Channel 4 is currently showing season two of the series in the early morning on weekends. Season three, containing the crossover episode with ER, entitled Unleashed, will be shown next year on Channel 4, with season two perhaps being shown again in the interim. It may be wise to set that video, Steve.

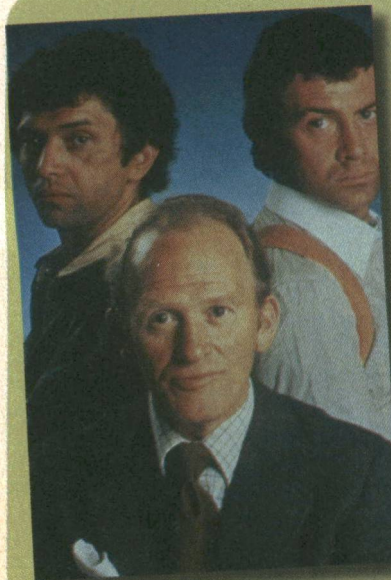

LETTER OF THE MONTH

Professional hit

I'm an avid fan of police dramas such as The Bill and Juliet Bravo. However, they whet my appetite for re-runs of another classic series – I used to watch it on an old black-and-white portable TV that I smuggled into my bedroom. Oh, the Ford Capris, the terrible trousers – I would love to see The Professionals again, in colour, in the comfort of my own grown-up living room. At last I'd be able to follow the plot, and work out whether it's Martin Shaw or Lewis Collins (from left, with co-star Gordon Jackson) I like best! Failing Bodie and Doyle, The Sweeney, with the late great John Thaw, would be a good consolation.

H Cox, e-mail

Well done, you've won £50 for writing the letter of the month. Granada Plus, available on the Telewest Digital service, has regularly shown both The Professionals and The Sweeney. Alternatively, both these series are available to buy on DVD and video.

A BREAK FROM V-EWING

I really enjoyed watching Dallas over the last 18 months and wanted to know if you have any plans on showing the films to complete the series. After the final episode your announcer stated that Dallas would be back in a short while. What does this mean? Is this the films or are you showing the series again?

Would it be possible to know when or if the films will be shown as I would hate to miss out on the final shows after being a loyal fan for so long!

Caroline Richardson, e-mail

A UK Gold spokesperson replies: 'We're going to give Bobby, JR and co a bit of a break and then consider showing it at the start of next year. UK Gold does not hold the rights to the Dallas movies, we believe they were bought by another broadcaster.'

A GUNDAM WING AND A PRAYER

A couple of months ago Cartoon Network showed the film Gundam Wing: Endless Waltz and have not repeated it since. I was a devoted watcher of the series but I missed it that Saturday and was wondering whether there were any plans to repeat it soon.

Tim Stacey, e-mail

Unfortunately, Tim, Cartoon Network has told us that there are no plans to repeat Endless Waltz [featuring Heero, left] in the near future. However, keep an eye on the listings later in the year, as this may change.

S*M*A*S*H HIT

While it has been very good to see reruns of *M*A*S*H* on Paramount Comedy Channel, is it not about time that they started showing some of the later series? We are now in the process of the third (!) showing of the early series and it appears that in June the same episodes are being rerun yet again. What are the chances of us getting to see the later series with BJ and Colonel Potter?

Monster M*A*S*H: viewers want more of Radar and Hawkeye

Ray Gray, e-mail

A Paramount Comedy Channel spokesperson replies: 'There are 11 series of *M*A*S*H* available and we currently hold the licence to the first three series. We hope to acquire more series in the coming year.'

MTV'S FAB FUNNY BUSINESS

A big thank you to MTV for their showing of the Top 50 Funniest Videos weekend. I thoroughly enjoyed this programme, which aired on 4 and 5 May. Unfortunately, I missed most of the programme shown on the Saturday. Can you tell me if this particular programme will be aired again?

I am also a big fan of the Foo Fighters and wonder if there are any plans for a Foo Fighters day, or at least a Behind the Music show.

K Waller, Southampton

An MTV spokesperson replies: 'We will definitely be showing the Top 50 Funniest Videos again, and probably very shortly. We don't have a confirmed date as yet, but we'll keep you posted! There are no plans to have a Foo Fighters Day on MTV.'

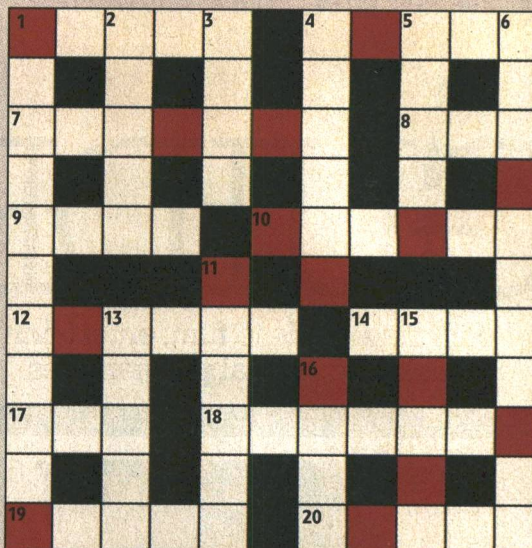

ADDICTED TO DRAGONBALL Z

Thank you so much for the new Dragonball Z sagas [Cartoon Network]. It is such an addictive programme and I am so glad it is shown for an hour each night – it is a great break from revising. Dragonball Z is suitable for all ages – I'm 14 and love it! There is just one thing though, please don't have such a big gap between showing new series'. Thanks again.

Michelle Cunningham, Essex

One Hit Wonderland
Discovery
Weekdays from 29th, 8.00pm

The opportunity to gain the upper hand over one of the nation's most publicised baddies, Pop Idol's Simon Cowell, proved too attractive for comedian and author Tony Hawks. He bet Cowell that he could make a Top 20 hit in at least one European country, and decided to let a film crew follow his efforts. With only one 1988 minor hit under his belt (Stutter Rap), Tony enlists the help of music moguls ranging from Pete Waterman to Pete Tong. He explains: 'In my desperate attempt to prove that my pop career isn't yet entirely over, I have changed my musical styles with what some have described as being "an alarming lack of integrity"'. Whether dueting with Norman Wisdom (a cult idol in Albania) and Paula Selina (Romania's answer to Posh Spice) will be what it takes remains to be seen.

DRAMA

Six Feet Under
E4
Wednesdays,
9.00pm

American Beauty creator Alan Ball continues his exploration of what lies beneath the façade of American suburban life in this new black comedy series, which he has written and directed. The Fishers appear to be an ordinary middle class American family getting together for Christmas, but it quickly emerges all is not what it seems. For starters, the family business is a Los Angeles funeral parlour. Scarcely have we seen Mrs Fisher (Frances Conroy) basting the pot roast for her family get-together than her husband, Nathaniel (Richard Jenkins), is killed while driving his brand new hearse to pick up his son Nate (Peter Krause) from the airport. As dependable brother David (Michael C Hall) phones his siblings to tell them the news, we find his brother Nate having casual sex in an airport cupboard. Rebellious younger sister Claire (Lauren Ambrose) has just smoked some crystal meth. And there are plenty more skeletons in the family cupboard still to come bursting out. Echoes of David Lynch cinematography matched with a fearless script make this series one to follow.

A Season of Rita Hayworth
Carlton Cinema
Monday 22nd
to Friday 26th, 7.00pm

Born Margarita Carmen Cansino, Rita Hayworth was one of the biggest stars of Hollywood's golden age – and it's easy to see why in the steamy film noir Gilda (1946), in which the flame-haired goddess scorches the screen with a performance of sexually charged perfection. There's a distinct change of pace in Separate Tables (1958). This thoughtful adaptation of Terence Rattigan's stage play is an intimate and melancholy romantic drama set in an off-season British seaside hotel. It finds a dream-ticket ensemble (which includes Hayworth, Burt Lancaster, and Oscar-winners David Niven and Wendy Hiller) getting to grips with the trying emotional entanglements of their characters with great skill and subtlety. Meanwhile, Down to Earth (1947) is a smart, supremely enjoyable and sumptuously photographed song-and-dance fantasy which sees Ancient Greek muse Hayworth returning to Earth to help out with a Broadway musical.

TO THE POINT

LIFE OF BRIAN, Paramount Comedy Channel, Sunday 21st, 10.00pm
It's a classic. Perfectly encapsulating the Monty Python sense of humour, no matter how many times you see it, Life of Brian remains just as impressive today. The numerous laughs are paired with some thought-provoking social commentary, and, of course, the film famously gave rise to one of the most-sung Python numbers of all time. Altogether now, 'Always look on the ...'

BOBRIE TO RUN

He's already made his name as one of Britain's most promising athletes – now Daniel Caines is seeking glory on the Grand Prix circuit. Interview: Neil Martin

DANIEL CAINES ALREADY HAS his foot in the door of world athletics – but now he is aiming to become a household name.

Caines, 23, made his mark when he claimed the World Indoor 400m title last year. But the Birmingham-based athlete is now focused on making another big step forward at this season's Grand Prix events, ahead of the Commonwealth Games and European Championships.

'Last year I felt I needed to get my foot in the door, but now I have to move up,' he says. 'I really want to make my mark on the world scene – that's my aim. I know there are lots of talented guys out there, but I feel good and want to step up.'

'Last year the indoor season was my focal point, but this time it's a means to an end. I have used it to get my speed up and overall it went really well. I feel a lot stronger and a lot faster for the summer ahead. I've got the Commonwealth Games and European Championships to focus on and it's important that I get more experience and use them as a stepping stone to bigger and better things.'

Caines first emerged at the Olympics in Sydney in 2000 when, as a late replacement for Mark Richardson, he recorded a personal best time of 45.37 seconds in the 400m heats before, unfortunately, being eliminated in the semi-finals.

Sporting prowess runs in the family. His mother Blondelle Thompson is a former British record holder in the 100m hurdles, while father Joe was a junior international sprinter. Uncle Garry Thompson, meanwhile, was a professional footballer who played for Aston Villa and Coventry City, among others. But Caines is now ready to grab the limelight for himself.

'My indoor times suggest that I can run 44.5 secs this year. Since Sydney I feel as if I have come on in leaps and bounds,' he explains. 'I ran 45.5 secs last year while I was injured, so I feel I can go quicker. I've got the talent and the self-belief so I just have to keep pushing forward. I'm still young and have time on my side, but I think I'm capable of bigger things.'

With the 400m event at the Commonwealth Games at the end of July closely followed by the European Championships in Munich, Caines knows he will have to prepare properly in order to peak at the perfect moment. 'Leading up to the Commonwealths and European Championships it's important that I build up in the correct way. I will probably run in some Grand Prix events having worked out the best times to run to get myself ready for the major championships.'

'The main men this year will probably be the reigning world champion, Avarad Moncur, and the Jamaicans, like Greg Haughton and Michael McDonald. It will be a very strong field.'

Although his sights are set very high, one ambition that Caines cannot fulfil this season is to shine in the Golden League. Elite athletes are invited to seven major meetings throughout the season and can claim a share of 50kg of gold ingots if they win their discipline at each meeting. Caines will have to wait for his chance to win the pot of gold, but believes the concept is great for athletics.

'The men's 400m is not part of the Golden League this season, but it is next season and it's something I would definitely aim for in the future,' he reveals. 'I think it's only fair that there is something like the Golden League with a big prize up for grabs because athletics is a full-time job and people train up to 14 times a week in order to compete. When you compare the money in athletics with the cash in football it's amazing. Athletes go to the Olympics and come home with nothing. I'm not a greedy person, but everybody has to pay the bills.'

'I know there are lots of talented guys out there, but I feel good and want to step up'

Ones to watch

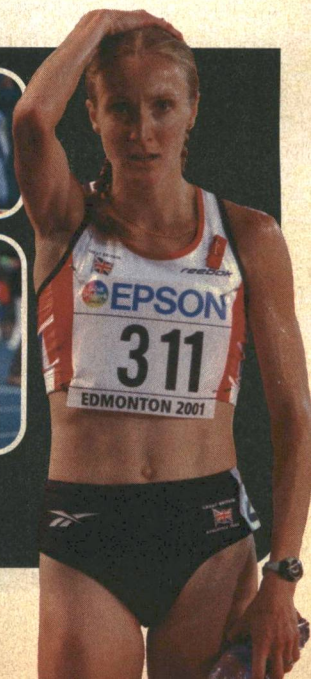

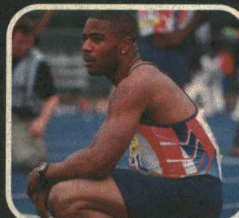

We take a look at some of the other British competitors who are going all-out for glory in this summer's top events

Athletics fans can look forward to Britain's finest competing in this month's Grand Prix series, particularly with the European Championships and Commonwealth Games to look forward to. So who should we watch for ...?

► The rivalry between 100m sprinters Dwain Chambers and Mark Lewis-Francis is set to provide one of the most thrilling duels of the summer. Having won the gold medal at the World Junior Championships in 2000, Lewis-Francis struggled to get the better of Chambers at senior level last year. And, as well as each other, Lewis-Francis and Chambers will have to worry about 100m world record holder Maurice Greene from the US and his sprint rival, Trinidad and Tobago's Ato Boldon. ► Christian Malcolm will be hoping to prove he is one of the world's best at the 200m, while veteran Welshman Colin Jackson is still likely to pose a threat in the 110m hurdles event. ► Expectations are high for Paula Radcliffe in the women's 10,000m following her success in this year's London Marathon. Radcliffe has always been one of the leading athletes in her event, but her marathon victory could inspire her to even greater heights.

IN LIGHT OF THE battering English cricket received at the hands of Australia and Pakistan in the corresponding series last year, perhaps the English Cricket Board could have been kinder this summer in its choice of opposition for England opener Marcus Trescothick and his team-mates? Perhaps, but with an Ashes tour to Australia and a World Cup to contest in the next 12 months, taking on India and Sri Lanka in limited-overs competition will provide frontline batsmen like Trescothick with an invaluable sighter of two of the best one-day teams on the planet.

'Pretty good,' replies Trescothick, when asked his opinion of the calibre of the opposition. 'We've played against both of them within the past two years. We lost convincingly to Sri Lanka on their patch. And we drew with India, three games each. They're both excellent, but I think we are in with a good shout of beating both of them.'

As international careers go, Trescothick's has been a stop-start affair. Yet with little more than two years' experience at Test level, he is already regarded as the principal source of runs in a rapidly improving side. It was a surprise to many that Trescothick didn't make the full England squad sooner than he did. After all, this is a player who made his first-class debut in 1993 aged 17. As captain of the England Under-19s, the Somerset left-hander recorded over 1000 runs (an achievement beaten only by Hampshire's John Crawley in English cricket) but had to wait until 2000 to get his break at senior level.

The recent winter tour of the subcontinent couldn't have gone better for the Frome-born opener; he was the pick of England's batsmen in the one-dayers and finished with an excellent average of 53. However, this series is to be fought on altogether different wickets and as both India and Sri Lanka have shown on their previous visits to these shores, their pace bowlers are a match for any side in the world.

Trescothick acknowledges this and is nonplussed by the lack of recognition

Hitting HOME

Since his NatWest Series debut in 2000, England's Marcus Trescothick has experienced both pleasure and pain, writes Gareth Hargreaves afforded the likes of India's Srinath and Chaminda Vaas of Sri Lanka. 'The fact that they aren't seen as a Glenn McGrath or a Brett Lee is mainly because of the places they play; the pitches aren't quite as helpful to the seamer as they are in England. I remember watching the World Cup when Srinath played and he really was a handful on wickets over here - he proved he was a world-class bowler.'

And what of the next World Cup in South Africa? England, predictably, have been drawn in the so-called group of death. Australia, India and Pakistan will all pit their wits against them, with only the top three of seven countries advancing to the next round. A daunting prospect? Ordinarily, you would have to say yes. But this English team is on the way up; although the one-day results may not have been too flattering on their winter travels, the side's application and togetherness cannot be faulted.

'The nucleus of the side is there,' Trescothick declares. 'We went behind in India and New Zealand but fought back. We need to produce that kind of spirit all of the time.'

'Each side is going to have to play very well in order to win this series,' Trescothick asserts. 'These are three evenly matched sides, you only have to look at India - the amount of batting talent they have. If you're a spectator I'm sure people like Sachin Tendulkar are going to pull in huge crowds.'

England fans will no doubt be hoping Tendulkar continues the run of indifferent form that saw him dismissed for a duck in three out of four innings on India's recent tour of the West Indies.

With due respect to the undoubted quality of the touring parties, perhaps rather than ask how England will cope with India and Sri Lanka, we should question how the tourists will deal with the pace of Darren Gough and Matthew Hoggard, the bludgeoning power of Andrew Flintoff, and the craft of England's very own master batsman Marcus Trescothick. cg
